

THANK YOU.

Few groups have been at greater risk from COVID-19 than the people in our nation's prisons, jails, juvenile halls, and ICE detention centers. When the pandemic began in March 2020, the ACLU urgently sought improvements to conditions of confinement and the release of incarcerated people—especially medically vulnerable persons. This life-saving work would not have been possible without the remarkably generous assistance of the law offices listed below, who for over the past two years have provided tens of thousands of hours to protect the health of some of our most vulnerable populations. Thank you for your work.
